Motorclean has been awarded a coveted 'Highly Commended' status by the National Business Awards for 2007.

The Awards have been referred to as the 'Business Oscars' and recognize excellence in business performance and innovation across the UK. Motorclean competed in the Midlands & East of England category for the 'Business of the Year' title against hundreds of other businesses from the region.

A judging panel of influential individuals from leading businesses and organisations recognised the company's growth, market leadership and successful rebranding since a management buy out in 2005. Now the UK's second largest valeter, with a turnover of £19m, Motorclean has introduced new software to the industry to make it more efficient and expanded into public valeting, with the concession at Bluewater.

David Warren, CEO at Motorclean, said: "We've gone head to head with companies from all over the region and been recognised for our winning strategy. Every member of staff has contributed to our success at this award. Our plans for the future will see us become the largest business of our kind, to complement our leading reputation for quality and customer service."
